

Ten percent of brain myth.

The 10 percent of brain myth is the widely perpetuated urban myth that most or all humans only make use of 10 percent (or some other small percentage) of their brains. It has been misattributed to many people, including Albert Einstein and Miroslaw Magola alias Kinetic Man. By extrapolation, it is suggested that a person may harness this unused potential and increase intelligence.

Lucy is a science fiction action film written and directed by Luc Besson and produced by his wife Virginie Silla for his company Europacorp. The film was shot in Taipei, Paris and New York City. It stars Scarlett Johansson, Morgan Freeman, Amr Waked and Choi Min-sik. Johansson portrays the title character, a woman who gains psychokinetic abilities from a nootropic drug being absorbed into her bloodstream.

Miroslaw Magola who took part in Stan Lee's Superhumans - Mind Force aired on Discovery and History Channel told us : "ten percent of brain" belief by asserting that the "unused" ninety percent of the human brain is capable of exhibiting psychic powers and can be trained to perform psychokinesis and extra-sensory perception. Meet the real life Magneto - German psychic claims he uses telepathic powers to manipulate metal just like X-Men supervillain,

Moreover this phenomenon deals with overcoming the power of gravity, which according to the known and generally accepted laws of physics should not be possible, and yet, as can be clearly seen by people who have witnessed Magola, is absolutely possible.

Besides the remarkable feats of Magola, Russian Nina Kulagina's telekinetic powers were captured on film, and Stanislaw Tomczyk, a Polish woman living in early 1900s, demonstrated her remarkable telekinesis abilities in a controlled testing environment in front of many witnesses.

Nina Kulagina, Eusapia Palladino, Swami Rama, Uri Geller and Miroslaw Magola are some of the famous people who have claimed and demonstrated telekinetic. Source:
